Brief History of PKU

PKU Logo

This logo is composed of two ancient Chinese seal characters “Bei Da”, the abbreviation of Peking University in Chinese. The “Bei” character on top looks like a mountain and the “Da” character beneath looks like a simplified human figure. This symbolizes that the people at PKU bear responsibilities on their shoulders. The identifying colour of PKU is the colour known as Beida Red, which symbolizes creative spirit and change.

Peking University West Gate (Main Gate)

In Ming Dynasty, the area where the West Gate is situated now used to be part of the Shaoyuan Garden, a famous scenic spot where many literati enjoyed the view and composed poetry. Later in Qing Dynasty, the garden was rebuilt into an emperor's garden, also frequently visited by scholars of that time.

Weiming Lake & Boya Pagoda

During the Qing dynasty, the Weiming lake area was part of the Shuchun Garden. The Garden was given by Emperor Qianlong to his favourite minister He Shen, who oversaw its extravagant construction. Even today, some remnants of the Shuchun Garden can still be seen. Boya Pagoda is an example of traditional Chinese architecture built in western way. The whole pagoda is constructed of reinforced concrete except its stone base.
